PhD in Philosophy (2007) with a dissertation on the pragmatics of irony. Post-doctoral fellow (2008-2010) at the Center for the Study of Language and Information (CSLI, Stanford University); then (2010-2013) Juan de la Cierva researcher at the ILCLI; and currently (2013-present) an assistant professor at the Department of Basque Language and Communication. Her main research interests include irony, non-literal speech, fictional discourse, and the semantics and pragmatics of Basque. Her publications and contributions are devoted to those very fields. She is the assistant secretary of GOGOIA — the ILCLI journal, which is devoted to the study of language, knowledge, communication, and action— since 2002. She is currently a member of the research group on Language, Action, and Thought.
