Nora Aranberri is a lecturer at the Department of Didactics of Language and Literature and a member of the IXA research group (Faculty of Computer Science). She earned her PhD in Translation Studies through collaboration between Dublin City University and Symantec Corporation in 2010. After working for TAUS, an industrial organization that aims to promote best practices in the translation industry, she joined the IXA group as a Marie Curie fellow in 2012. Since, she has participated in national and European projects on machine translation (QTLeap, TADEEP, QUALES). She primarily works on projects that aim to exploit linguistic knowledge and has a particular interest in quality evaluation post-editing.
